ABSTRACT:

The following Tourism Management system is implemented by C-Programming. It enables the user to book a tour package conveniently.

Input and Output functions—'printf' and 'scanf'; fundamental variable type 'int'; Character arrays; Conditional statements—'if' and 'else' and the 'fgets' function were used in the program.

The page opens with a welcome note that reads "Welcome to S&N Tours 'n' Travels! How may we assist you?". The user is then expected to press '1' in order to be able to view and book a tour package. The user is given the following tour packages to choose from:

1. Place: Venice, Italy for five days and six nights. Accommodation options: Hotel Armani, Shangri-La Hotel, ITC Hotel, Oberoi Resorts. Price: Rs. 15,000. 2. Place: Dubrovnik, Croatia for seven days and eight nights. Accommodation options: Hotel Aman, Braavos Resorts, D&D Bed and Breakfast. Price: Rs, 20,000. 3. Place: Helsinki, Finland for six days and seven nights. Accommodation options: Hotel Omate, Hotel Kahvi, Sauna Resorts. Price: Rs. 17,000.

The user is then expected to enter one of the three numbers: 1, 2 and 3 corresponding to the Venice, Dubrovnik and Helsinki tour packages respectively. Thus, a tour package is chosen for the further booking process. The user then has to enter the dates for the tour and available accommodations are displayed for the user's information.

The user then has to enter their name and mobile number and the details are then confirmed. The program also displays the user's account balance before the transaction has been made, along with the amount (corresponding to the chosen package) that was deducted during the transaction. Text wishing the user a safe trip is then displayed at the end.

In case the transaction has failed, the same is displayed to the user.

The user is then given two options. In order to check the status and details of a previously purchased package, the user is asked to enter "1" and to exit the program, the user is asked to enter "2".

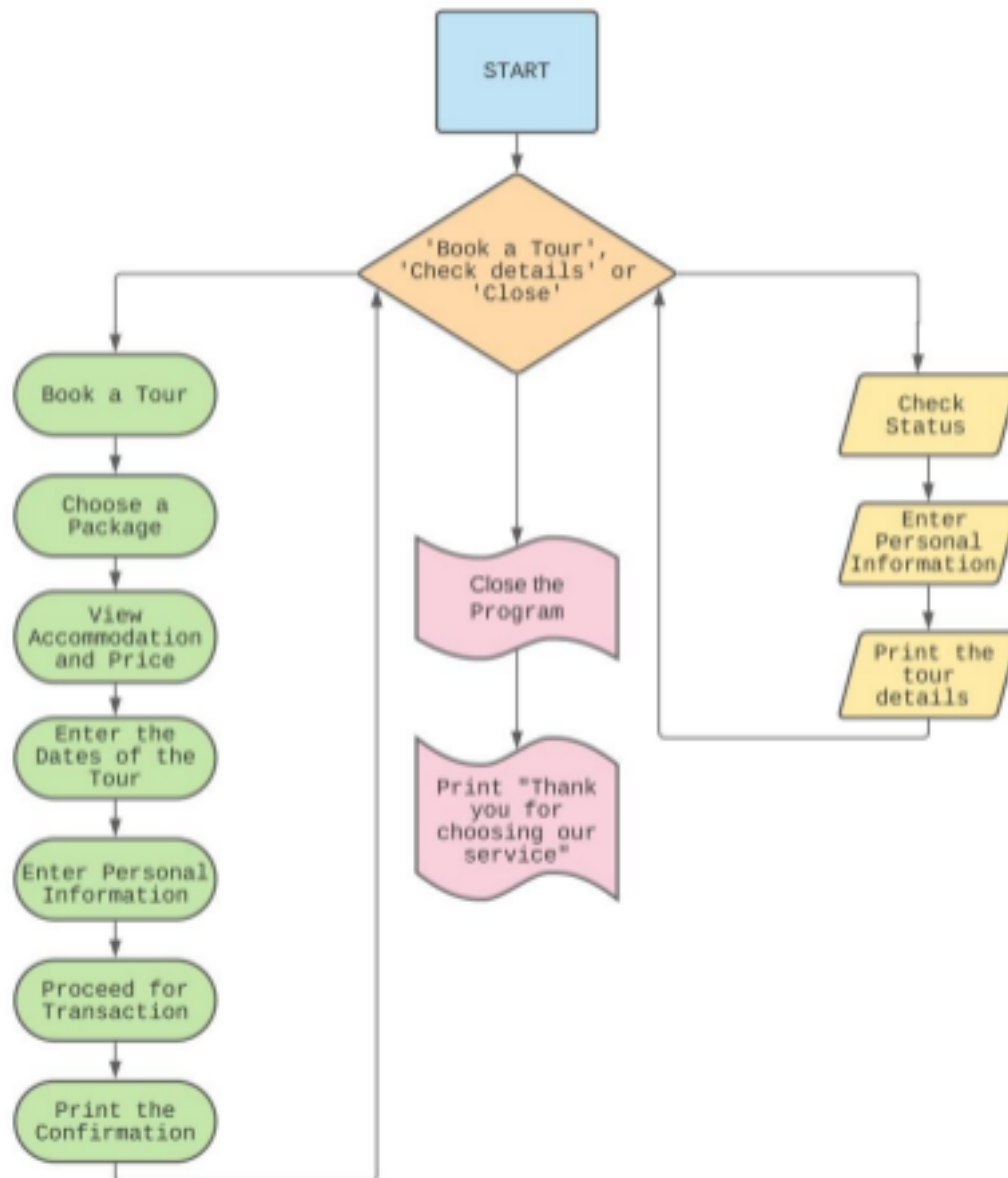

When the user chooses to view the status and details of a previously purchased package, the name and mobile number are asked. Then, according to the chosen package, the details are displayed. The booking status is also displayed.

The user can exit the program by choosing '1'.

ALGORITHM:

1. Start the Program.
2. Print or display the Welcome Note.
3. Print the instruction enabling the user to enter '1' to view and book a tour package.
4. Declare and read the variables for the user to choose a tour package.
5. Print the details of three different tour packages enabling the user to choose one.
6. Display the chosen package after the user has entered any of the three numbers '1, 2 and 3' corresponding to the three different packages.
7. Ask the user to enter the dates of the tour and confirm them.
8. Display the available accommodation for the user's information.
9. Ask the user to enter their name and mobile number and confirm the details by displaying their personal details.
10. Print a statement displaying the balance in their bank account and the cost of the tour package chosen, i.e, the amount debited.
11. Print the instruction enabling the user to enter '1' to proceed for payment.
12. Print or display the payment details, i.e, if the payment was successful or not.
13. Print the "Thank you" note.
14. Print the instruction enabling the user to enter '1' to check the status and details of a previously purchased package and '2' to close the application.
15. If the user chooses '1', display the details of the tour corresponding to the package chosen.
16. Then, go back to step-13.
17. If the user chooses '2', go back to step-13.
18. End the program.
